FEATURED MARKET DATA

November CPI Below Forecasts

November CPI came in at 2.7% year-over-year, below a level of 3.0% projected by a Bloomberg survey of economists. A slower rate of growth in food prices contributed to the slower pace of inflation. The cost of services contributed to the improvement as housing, transportation services and medical services all slowed from September. Reactions to the lower-than-expected CPI print have been viewed with caution as markets view the data as noisy. The timing of data collections may have skewed prices lower. Employment and inflation data will remain critical as the Fed assesses the appropriate fed funds rate in 2026.
